THE FEDERAL ELECTION

With 116 seats and only two still remaining doubtful, the Conservatives would now secure a clear majority in the Federal parliament.

In these circumstances, it is generally believed that Premier King will not resign before meeting parliament. As an election, this was one of the most significant ever held in Canada and the result is very much as expected. In any event, the election of parliament is not likely to see anything in the way of sewing legislation. The situation has resulted in the most approach to a parliamentary deadlock in the history of the Dominion.

Premier King can only count on majority with the help of Progressive, Labor and Independents, groups which, although not included in the official opposition, sit on the opposite side of the last House. There is likely to be little beyond necessary money appropriations and essential legislation, and at this situation will be very costly waste of money and time.

As the parties stand at present a situation may arise at any moment with a few surprised supporters away a surprise announcement perhaps which would turn out whatever government was in power. Premier Liberal feel that any motion calling for higher protection of the Liberal, Progressive, Labor and independent members to the aid of the government. They take part of the view that, under existing practice, a government is in power until it fails to retain the confidence of parliament, that is, until it is clearly shown to be unable to carry out its program. This is a view which is not shared by all members of the government. It is prevalent that Canada's financial parliament will not be of long duration, in fact, prominent members insist that there is nothing to prevent that but to keep in regulation.

Mr. King has to face the conservative, having suffered the defeat of the vote of the ministers, and being in a position to lose the support of the opposition. It is not to the credit of the cabinet that it will of the election. Against this is the argument of the superiority of the government in dealing with the emergency shall have its confidence.

Very evidently reaction is placed on the government. The government
